Filmstars Generate 3000 Revenue In the next day.Slow virus infection, chromosomal abnormalities and DNA damage in mouse thymocytes. Mouse thymocytes were infected in vitro with a slow-cycling, non-cytopathic DNA virus, polyoma virus (PV). As an indicator of the presence of slow virus infection, the cells were cultured in the presence of bromodeoxyuridine (BrdU) so that cells expressing a BrdU-DNA polymerase alpha would be fluorescently stained. Bromodeoxyuridine-labeled thymocytes from PV-infected mice were examined and compared with those from mock-infected mice. The infected thymocytes contained numerous abnormal giant polyploid nuclei with irregular chromosome sets (100-300,000c), which were formed by abnormal mitosis. With age, there were nearly 50% of polyploid nuclei with various degrees of DNA damage. When the cells were injected into newborn mice, 75% of polyploid cells gave rise to immature thymocytes with chromosome damage. These findings suggest that polyoma slow virus infection in thymocytes might induce chromosomal abnormalities and DNA damage and generate cells with genetic instability. Ask HN: Family Planning for a Silicon Valley Company - kashif Our company is looking into bringing in people who want to get the benefits of working for a startup. The main criteria that we have for choosing among candidates is their level of interest in coding and startup culture. What kind of response should we expect? Is it reasonable to say that we will only be looking at the top 5% of applicants? ===== y0tz I think it's a very smart idea to bring in talent into your company. This person is in the top 5% of applicants. Now hire her. ~~~ jamesbritt "
